UK embassies overseas

In addition to its London office, the FCO has an overseas network of over 200 diplomatic offices (also referred to as 'Diplomatic Missions'). Staff in the consular section of these offices offer practical advice, assistance and support to British nationals who travel or live overseas. Typical consular duties include issuing passports and emergency passports; registering births and deaths; handling cases of child abduction and forced marriages; and assisting Britons who have been detained or imprisoned, who have fallen ill or who have been the victim of a crime.

On the FCO website there is a list of UK Overseas Missions with full information and contact details.

Haemophilia treatment centres

WFH produces Passport: Global Treatment Centre Directory, which lists over 900 haemophilia treatment centres and national haemophilia organisations in more than 100 countries, including contact names, telephone and fax numbers, and email and website addresses. This information is updated daily, as changes are received. The directory can be searched online (on the WFH website www.wfh.org, click on Resources and then Treatment Centre Directory, Passport).

A print edition of the directory (which is updated once a year) is also available to buy online.
